Boltenmühle Restaurant in the Ruppın Switzerland

From an elevated viewpoint, a beautiful view opens up over Boltenmühle's spacious outdoor terrace.

Between white parasols, rustic wooden benches and lovingly landscaped green areas, this traditional country restaurant invites you to enjoy a relaxing break.

The surrounding forests of the Ruppın Switzerland provide an impressive natural backdrop.

Amid the extensive forests of the Ruppın Switzerland, not far from Lake Tornow, lies the traditional Boltenmühle Restaurant.

This idyllic country restaurant combines Brandenburg hospitality with an exceptionally beautiful natural setting.

For cyclists, hikers and anyone seeking relaxation, Boltenmühle is a rewarding destination for a leisurely break.

Boltenmühle Restaurant is located in one of northern Brandenburg's most scenic natural landscapes.

Surrounded by forests, small lakes and the Binenbach valley, the historic mill complex invites you to leave everyday life behind for a while.

The restaurant serves regional Brandenburg cuisine. This includes fish dishes and other Brandenburg specialities. Seasonal ingredients, as well as herbs and vegetables from the restaurant's own garden, shape the culinary offering.

In fine weather, the terrace is particularly inviting, with views of the surrounding greenery.

The cosy dining rooms also offer a pleasant place to stop after a hike or cycle ride.

The former mill site has retained its original character. The Binenbach stream and mill wheel recall the history of this special place.

Boltenmühle is therefore more than a restaurant:
it is also a starting point for exploring the Ruppiner Schweiz.
The combination of nature, regional cuisine and historic atmosphere makes it a popular destination.

History and special features

The history of Boltenmühle dates back to the early 18th century. The foundations for the mill site on the Binenbach were laid as early as 1718. Over the following decades, the complex developed into a watermill and sawmill.

Over time, ownership changed and the mill's economic importance declined. During the 20th century, Boltenmühle increasingly became a destination for day trips and recreation.

A major setback came with the fire in June 1992, which destroyed the historic building. It was subsequently rebuilt in keeping with its historic model. The country restaurant reopened at Whitsun 1996.

Today, Boltenmühle combines its long history with a restaurant, accommodation and further services for holidaymakers and day visitors.

Its special features include its immediate woodland setting, its proximity to Lake Tornow, the Binenbach and its historic links to milling.

Sights

Boltenmühle and its surroundings offer several interesting destinations:

- Lake Tornow:

A lake surrounded by forests that makes the landscape of the Ruppiner Schweiz particularly appealing.

- Binenbach:

A small, natural stream flowing through a varied wooded valley between Lake Kalk and Lake Tornow.

- Lake Kalk:

Another scenic lake that can be combined with a hike through the Binenbach valley.

- Historic mill complex:

The mill wheel and the history of the former watermill and sawmill recall the site's former use.

- Kunsterspring Wildlife Park:

Another destination in the surrounding area, particularly suitable for families.

The surrounding forest paths offer numerous opportunities to explore the Ruppiner Schweiz on foot or by bicycle.

Visitor information

Boltenmühle Restaurant is a working country restaurant and not a conventional museum or visitor attraction.

The restaurant can be visited during its respective opening hours. In fine weather, stopping on the terrace is a pleasant option.

For larger groups, family celebrations or visits at particularly busy times, booking a table in advance is recommended.

Anyone wishing to explore the surrounding area should allow enough time for a walk along Lake Tornow or through the forests of the Binenbach valley.

Boltenmühle's spacious paved courtyard invites you to enjoy a cosy break, with rustic wooden benches, white parasols and plenty of greenery. The restaurant is set in the scenic woodland landscape of the Ruppiner Schweiz.

Boltenmühle's historic mill wheel recalls the former mill site's past in the Ruppiner Schweiz. The moss-covered wheel, traditional half-timbered façade and lush vegetation give this part of the complex a special charm.

The idyllic Jägerteich enchants visitors with its still surface, flowering water lilies and lush waterside vegetation.

The surrounding trees are reflected in the calm water between the reeds and dense greenery.

The pink water-lily blossoms lend this natural setting a special appeal and make it a wonderful photographic subject for nature lovers.

Jägerteich reveals a particularly tranquil, natural side.

The dense forests are reflected on the almost motionless surface of the water, while a small patch of water lilies adds a charming accent.

The natural bank, with its old trees and dead branches, emphasises the untouched atmosphere of this idyllic woodland pond.
